To Drill or not to Drill

The Arctic National Wildlife Refuge is the home of many species of wildlife, but the oil industry believes the refuge is the perfect site for the “sustainable” oil exploration. This could be true but, what will happen with the environment?

Oil industry leaders and others say that people will benefit from the oil under the surface of the refuge. In their opinion, this oil will help reduce high fuel prices.

I believe the cost of such drilling is too high, I fear that the drilling will disturb the natural life of every animal species in the refuge, which has a very delicate environmental balance. In addition to this, experts say that the oil in the area is less than we need for six months.

The United States is the largest consumer of oil, instead of drilling for oil, we should decrease our need for oil simply by using less. We must work together to reduce the oil we use in order to preserve the wildlife.
